

Officer Involved Shootings

Some of our most complex and highly litigated investigations, how we respond as an agency, as an Investigator and Adjudicator matters more than ever before. Are you ready?

Course Overview

Officer-involved shootings (OIS) are among the most critical and high-stakes events for law enforcement agencies. Such incidents can traumatize agencies, employees, and the communities they serve. The intense scrutiny from the media, the public, and potential civil or criminal liability places immense pressure on all involved. Civil judgments and administrative consequences can significantly impact agency effectiveness, employee morale, and community trust.

This 2.5-day course prepares law enforcement personnel and investigators to manage and investigate OIS and in-custody death incidents with professionalism, integrity, and adherence to industry standards. It is designed to provide the knowledge and skills necessary to conduct investigations that uphold both legal and procedural integrity while seeking the truth in complex and high-pressure scenarios.

Participants will learn investigative protocols applicable to all law enforcement use-of-force incidents, including both lethal and less-lethal applications, as well as “hits” and “non-hits,” and incidents that occur on or off duty. Instruction incorporates real-world case studies, authentic crime scene photographs, and personal investigative experiences, ensuring a practical and realistic learning experience.

This course is designed for:

- Front-line investigators and supervisors responsible for use-of-force incidents
- Middle managers and executive personnel responsible for adjudicating agency uses of force (criminal and administrative)
- Crime scene technicians, medical examiner/coroner investigators, military investigators, criminal analysts, prosecuting attorneys, and district attorney investigative personnel
